LONDON, Feb. 5.

THE proclamation calls upon me with unwearied assiduity to fall and humble myself." For what? — As a subject, I am more pleased against than Awing. Have I betrayed the nation, and subverted the constitution? Have I enacted arbitrary laws and shed innocent blood? Have I prostituted and prevaricated with oaths, and laid snares for honest men? Have I oppressed the nation, robbed her stately treasury and squandered the public money? Why then am I to fall like a hypocrite to excuse and extenuate the villanies of others? I have my private faults as all men have; for these I will humble myself in private, but I will never take public shame for the crimes of others, who have been a stain to their country, as much as against Heaven. Half a score execrable rascals have just reason to fear, being brought upon their own knees to the block, they get a proclamation to bring the people upon their knees to usurped power, as if the fault were theirs. And while they, like tame sheep, kneel and pray in humble obedience to the Crown and Mitre, Jemmy Twitcher, Dick Rigby, and the rest of the gang, laugh at half Italy and study new means to filch their property.

We see a great many crowned fools, a crowned head is a great phenomenon. — How wonderfully potent are the spells and charms that lie within the circle of that standing cap! Hi prosit! says the crowned thing, let all wealth be cut in that part of our dominions, let all habitations be destroyed and all lands be desolate. We give your prayers to the winds, your property to the invader, shed your blood to the earth. And for the more effectual success of our designs, says the crowned cap without bells, we will that all persons in such part of our territories shall fall upon their knees on a certain day, and confess that they who are sufferers, are the criminals. That they are the cause of the events which they have an hundred times remonstrated against, and ought to go to the Devil for their ignorance, venality, profligacy, and tyranny of their choice. Even the bloody Bishops, who voted for havoc and desolation of their christian brethren, shall weep crocodile tears over a perverse generation, "which infidelity and unfruitfulness to the Church, are the cause of all our calamities." Their own infidelity, profaneness, perversity, and profligacy of character, will not appear in the catalogue of national crimes.

Sir THOMAS PYE's Speech, in delivering to Admiral Keppel his Sword.

"Admiral Keppel,

It is no small pleasure for me to receive the commands of the Court I have the honour to preside at; that in delivering you your sword, I am to congratulate you on its being restored to you with fresh honour, hoping ere long you will be called forth by your sovereign, to draw it once more in the defence of your country."

About twelve o'clock the grand procession from the Court began in the following order:

A band of music playing "See the conquering Hero comes."

ADMIRAL KEPPEL.

General Keppel, with Sir Edward Hughes, and Admiral Campbell.

Duke of Portland, Marquis of Rockingham, and the Earl of Effingham.

About sixty Captains, and an innumerable set of Masters and Lieutenants.

The rear was brought up by three Danish noblemen volunteers.

They all walked with their hats in their hands (on which were blue cockades, stamped in gold letters, KEPPEL) to Admiral Keppel's house, in St. James's street; after which, every merchant ship in the harbour, and at Spithead, gave a grand salute of 15 guns each, the bells were set a ringing, and the evening concluded with bonfires, illuminations, guns firing, and other demonstrations of joy.

As soon as he had got into his own house he came to the window, with the Duke of Cumberland on his right hand, and Sir Robert Harland on his left, bowed to the people in the street, and then received the congratulations of the noblemen and gentlemen on his honourable acquittal. The band at the same time playing, "Rule Britannia." It is impossible to paint the joy that pervaded every face. Holiday was expressed in every look, and the hearts of the people were in their eyes. The Admiral alone seemed pensive, and had many conflicting passions labouring in his countenance.

A magnificent entertainment was prepared by the Captains of the Western fleet, to which the Admiral, and the Members of the Court Martial were invited: And this day they will give a ball to the ladies. The streets were all illuminated, and an universal joy and festivity reigned among every rank of people.

Never did the British flag receive so much true honour as it has by the trial of Admiral Keppel. Dependent men have asserted independency, and Scotchmen have become Patriots. Nobly have the Commons, the Captains of the Navy and Navy Board stood in defence of of that bravery, skill, and virtue, which they revered; and after this, never let it be said that patriotism or independency are the peculiar growth of any country. Never was there a man more nobly assisted than Admiral Keppel has been by a Scotch Consul—never a man more honourably defended than Admiral Keppel has been by Scotch witnesse—never a man more generously tried than Admiral Keppel has been by Scotch Judges. Scotch, English, and Irish—Foreigners and natives, have acted with one consent, spoke with one mouth and dictated with one heart. They have unanimously agreed in their assistance to villainy.

Sir Hugh Pallifer's windows in Pall-mall were began to be broken early in the evening, upon which a Captain's guard was sent for; and when the soldiers came the remainder oft he windows, and even the lamps were broken.

The illuminations were general and universal, thro' the whole town: The houses of the nobility and gentry at the west-end of the town, were brilliant beyond description.

The Portico of the Marlton House was illuminated with upwards of 300 glass lamps.

Sir Hugh Pallifer arrived at his house in the Admiralty on Wednesday evening from Portsmouth.

The plate is taken off the door of Sir Hugh Pallifer in Pall Mall, and this label is affixed: "This house to be let."

Sir Hugh Pallifer quitted Portsmouth rather precipitately, business of importance requiring his attendance in town.

Amongst other strokes of satirical humour by the populace last night, Sir Hugh Palliser was hung up in effigy on Tower-Hill, dressed in a full suit of black, with a log book in his hand, and on it a label, "Altered by Captain Hood."

The resentment of the populace rose to such a pitch last night, that they broke into the house of Lord Sandwich, destroyed the greatest part of the furniture, and emptied nearly the whole contents into the street.

The house of Lord Mulgrave, and Captain Hood also suffered very materially.

American Intelligence.

BOSTON, July 19.

Last Thursday arrived in a safe port a ship of four hundred tuns, prize to the privateer ship Harlequin, of Salem, having on board five thousand four hundred barrels of Provisions, one thousand three hundred of which is flour. She carried eighteens guns, sixes and nines, and was taken after a smart engagement.

PHILADELPHIA, July 29.

On the 16th instant Capt. Ingersal, in the Monmouth, retook the sloop True Blue, of Salem, a prize to the Galatea; and on the 19th took the Schooner Bond, which was bound from New York for St. Eustatia, but taken by the Macaroni, retaken by the Greyhound sloop and sent for New York, when she was taken by Capt. Ingersal, who the same day took the sloop Columbia, of ten guns, Captain Hodson, from New York for Malaga.

By a gentleman from New York we are informed that the Galatea had returned from a cruise off Boston bay, were she fell in with the Minerva, a French frigate of 32 guns, who gave her a severe drubbing, killed the Lieutenant and several men; and could the Minerva have left her convoy, she would probably have shown the Galatea the way into Boston.

We are also told that the cutter Revenge, of New-York, had got into New York in a shattered condition, having only 31 men out of 85 fit for duty; and reported that they had received their dressing from a rebel frigate, being ashamed to say they were so mauled by the brave Captain Aguat, in a 13 gun merchantman.

The two standards, mentioned in his Excellency's letter in our last, were brought to town last Sunday morning, by Mr. Archer.

Lincoln brigadier generals Moultrie, Count Pulaski, and Huger, most of the members of the hon. the Senate and House of Representatives, a considerable number of civil and militia officers and other gentlemen. The Royal Georgia Gazette of the 19th of August, contains among others, the following Articles of Intelligence, viz.

That the armed ship Germaine and Brig Keppel sailed on a Cruize from Tybee on the 13th.

That the same Day arrived there, the ship Hero and Brig Betsy, from London (with Goods for Mr. Tunno and Mr. Shaw) who had parted with Admiral Arbuthnot's fleet, consisting of 2 ship of 74 and 1 of 64. Guns, and 80 Transports with Troops for New-York, on the 20th of July in Lat. 27.

That on the 14th arrived there the prize sloop Little Ned (of this Port, for St. Eustatius) taken the Day before off Winyah, by the Experiment Man of War, Commodore Sir James Wallace; who was left in Charge of several other Vessels.

That on the 15th arrived there, the Prize Spanish Schooner Jesus Nazareno, from Havana for Philadelphia, with Rum and Sugar, taken of Cape Hatteras, by the Privateer Brig. Mars, Capt. Cunningham of New York.

That the Privateer Brig Elphinston, Capt. Kennedy was arrived of Tybee, from a Cruize, and had taken 3 Prizes, but none of them were arrived. And

That on the 17th, the following ships sailed from thence for Ireland, the Sovereign, Flynn; the Monarch, Hall; the Favourite, Buttering (with Col. James Mark Prevost on board); the True-Briton, Stewart; and the Mary-Ann, Russel; also, the Union-Island, Ball; the Polly, Duncan; and the Industry, Hutchins, for Jamaica.

The same Gazette contains the Royal Relation of the surprise of the Fort at Stony Point; wherein it is pretended, that "Mr. Wayne was several Times repulsed, and left a considerable Number killed on the spot; but he being supported Mr. Washington, with the main Body of the army, the garrison were at last obliged to give Way, to a vast Superiority of Numbers, with the Loss of 30 men killed (among them Capt. Tan of the 17th) 43 wounded, and 206 Prisoners."—The Reader may compare this with the Account published in our last.

We have a Variety of Reports of the Motions of Gen. Gray's Army. But, according to such as seem to deserve most Credit, a considerable Part of their Force has been removed from Port Royal, and marched towards Savannah.

Several Officers in the Continental Service, prisoners of war in Georgia, whose paroles obliged them to remain at such posts to which they should be ordered by the commanding officer of the British troops there, having been brought off by armed parties of American troops, are to return and remain in that state, according to the tenor of their paroles. By Order of the General.
